Recent earthquake and related tremors that occurred in the Midwest have brought about several inquiries as it relates to earthquake coverage. Property policies typically exclude coverage for any damage caused by an earthquake.

The net worth for many of us is wrapped up in the value of our homes or commercial properties. Because of that, it is important to consider the financial impact we would have in the event our properties were significantly damaged or destroyed by an earthquake.

The image below shows where in the United States you will find the highest hazard to the lowest hazard for an earthquake. Please contact your Bearence Risk Consultant if you want to discuss this coverage or review your policy.
