Informational open houses in July for draft Master Water Supply Plan Update

The Metropolitan Council is hosting two informational open houses in July to provide information about the draft update to the Twin Cities metropolitan area Master Water Supply Plan. The update incorporates new technical information and to reflect the regional vision and new policies in Thrive MSP 2040 and the 2040 Water Resources Policy Plan.

Purpose of the open houses

These open houses will give interested stakeholders the opportunity to ask questions about the draft plan update and the process to update it, to inform their review and public comment.

The Council encourages community leaders, decision-makers, public works staff, community planners, city engineers, and anyone else interested in the sustainability of the water supply of the metropolitan region to attend. Staff will be available to answer questions, share and review community-specific technical information, and provide background about the plan update process.

The draft plan update can be found on the Metropolitan Council website.
